

April 2005

Dear Parent,

Thank you for considering our rigorous service learning partnership programs in the Americas and South Africa. We hope that you will carefully peruse them, noting their academic substance and seriousness of purpose. In short, we trust that you'll see their potential as valuable elements in your child's education.

We have designed our programs specifically for students at the secondary level, and base them on a model that we originally created for the American School in London. We intend that our programs supplement existing curriculum and service learning commitments of your child's school. And we pledge that they will promote intellectual curiosity, encourage appreciation for global connectedness, and foster an ethic of community service.

Your child will be challenged to sharpen critical thinking and analytical skills across various disciplines, including history, civics & government, education, economic development, and science & ecology. Perhaps most enduringly, he or she will make meaningful, life-long connections with peers at independent and government schools, while performing community service and during supervised social activities.

Our principals will be delighted to expand on our programs in person at your child's school, and can do so on request. Additionally of course, we're happy to address any specific queries that you may have, by phone or email. Please let us know if you're interested to learn more; we are reachable as indicated in the "Contact Us" section of this website.

We look forward to chatting with you...

Warmly,

Fungai Kanogoiwa
Managing Director

Aaron Casey
Vice President, Special Programs